Stampede Names Kevin Kelly as its President and Chief Operating Officer

BUFFALO, N.Y., December 19, 2006— Stampede, a leading value-added distributor of presentation and home theater technology, today announced the appointment of Kevin Kelly, previously vice president of sales and marketing, as its president and chief operating officer. The change will become effective on Monday, January 1, 2007.

In his new role, Kelly will oversee the company's day-to-day operations. This change in the company's senior management will enable Mark Wilkins, the company's previous president and current CEO, to develop Stampede's new ventures and initiatives, specifically the Chinese and Latin American markets.

“During Kevin's 19 years in the consumer electronics and computer technology industries, he has constantly proven his ability to conceptualize, manage and grow business ventures,” says Wilkins. “His leadership has pushed the sales and marketing divisions at Stampede to new levels.”

“I am excited with this new opportunity and look forward pressing onward with worldwide growth and new market development at Stampede,” says Kelly. “In the next year, we plan to expand our product offerings, further develop our private label line and continue our commitment to world class customer service and support.”

Since joining Stampede in 2001, Kelly has reorganized the sales department, added market focused sales groups, and created highly effective incentive programs that enabled the company to grow more than 350 percent. Additionally, under his management, the company has been ranked No. 1 in customer service by Pacific Media (2002); recognized among the “Fast Track 50,” the fastest growing businesses in Western New York (2002-2006); and internationally recognized as “Distributor of the Year” by the Audio Video Industry (2001). Kelly was honored with the “40 Under 40” award in 2003 by Buffalo's Business First and in 2005 by the consumer electronic industry's Dealerscope magazine.

Previous to Stampede, Kelly served as president and chief operating officer of the Advantage Computer Company, LLC., and president of Computers for Children, Inc., both located in Buffalo N.Y.
